

This should be the preferred option, where possible (e.g. when technically feasible), in order to provide more precise information to monitor the possible impact of the interviewing mode on the survey results.